Cooking School in Adelaide, SA We are an Adelaide cooking school where you learn how to create restaurant quality dishes in hands-on cooking classes with Australia's masters of Asian cuisine - wine and dine on the recipes. Adelaide has several existing cooking schools to choose from but already the Sticky Rice Cooking School at Stirling in the Adelaide Hills, promises to offer something special and unique which sets it apart from the others. Claire Fuller the proprietor wanted something more than a cooking class which was confined to a set of recipes or delivered in a soulless kitchen; she wanted something more than a demonstration by a celebrity chef once a year; and she wanted something more than a basic level of tuition but without the formality of chef school. From this desire, was born Sticky Rice Cooking School, a place where the food journey you choose, takes you on a first class cooking and cultural experience and delivers a wealth of knowledge and fun along the way. The product on offer at Sticky Rice Cooking School is that of a well organised class, with excellent tuition from experienced chefs. Hands-on classes of up to 18 people, cook up a storm in the inspiring and aesthetically pleasing 1940's building in Stirling. It's a fun filled, social class with plenty to offer the novice or experienced cook. It's a unique experience where the spirit of cooking is shared between food lovers.
