Manly SEA LIFE Sanctuary is striving to become a leader in the rescue and rehabilitation of injured wild marine animals as well as a pioneer of breeding programs to help safeguard the future of some of our most endangered species. Manly SEA LIFE Sanctuary has been successful in breeding a variety of marine animals. SEA LIFE Centres globally are the world's biggest seahorse breeding network and have also had success with various species of sharks, tropical fish, jellyfish, octopus, corals and more. Our goal is to breed these animals so that we can sustain our own collections and supply other aquariums without the need to collect animals from the wild. As a Sanctuary, we are able to provide a safe place for injured or sick marine life to receive treatment, rest and recover before being released back into the wild. We have installed dedicated rescue and rehabilitation facilities to allow a greater number of rescued animals to be cared for at one time as well as a larger variety of animals. By protecting local habitats as well as educating people about their contribution to conservation, we're hoping to protect both animals and their homes. Manly SEA LIFE Sanctuary protects its local marine environment in several ways. As a centre for marine education, we educate thousands of visitors each week about the impact humans have on the marine environment. We also teach our guests about what they can do to get involved, minimise their impact, and help protect the underwater world.
