When you first start looking at the cost of aged care it can be a confusing list of fees and charges. In any aged care home, there is a charge for every day you stay. As with living anywhere, there are all the basic costs - food, electricity, cleaning, washing. It's just the same as running a normal home. The Australian Government pays for the bulk of aged care in Australia. All fees are regulated by the Federal Government, so you will find that for similar services, at other facilities, you will be paying similar amounts.
