Flying School in Archerfield QLD The Royal Queensland Aero Club (RQAC) is one of the oldest flying school in Australia. With a long and proud history it continues to play a significant role in Australian aviation. A non profit body, which also owns and operates the Airline Academy of Australia (AAA), and the Aviation Training Establishment for Aircraft Engineers (ATAE). Flying training at The Royal Queensland Aero Club exceeds the standards of the Civil Aviation Safety Authority (CASA). Your training program is personalised to a one-on-one basis with your instructor. Training is provided at your own pace and assessed based on your individual competency. Their school considers safety to be the highest priority for all operations as demonstrated by our training standards. Royal Queensland Aero Club students come from a variety of backgrounds with various training requirements. They believe that a passion for aviation is vital to our student's achieving their goals. Training is flexible and can accommodate your timeframe, ambitions and budget. RQAC encourages the development of disciplined and highly competent pilots who possess the personal and professional skills to achieve success in the aviation industry.
